TUEDDAY MORNING, MARCH 21

THE Presion county Journal urgest the Legislature, at the approach of the subject to the free the Legislature at the approach of the President Line and a weary morning the Legislature at the approach of the Tendant and the Lagrangian and the Capital guestion, below proceeding of the Tendant and the Lagrangian and the Capital permanently, and asks, what the press of the State think of the Journal turne to the press of the State than the Lagrangian and the proceed forthwith to build; and that is confessedly out of the question now. When the city of Wheeling offered to build a State House, and give it to the city free of cost for eleven years, on condition the capital would not be removed before that period, we expressed a sincere conviction that it was the most advantageous proposition to the State that had been made. The Legislature thought differently and rejected the proposition. Had they chosen to accept it, it is apparent that while this would havespared the treasury for a long period and would have been just as convenient in fact as any other point, it would at the same time have removed the controversy from the Legislature, for the acceptance, being in the nature of a contract, would have been irrepealable. Then legitimate legislation could have gone on uninterruptedly. As we understand, that proposition was withdrawn; and we hear that many of the gentlemen who signed the obligation to make it good are not sorry it was rejected, inasmuch as they felt they were giving much more than the city would ever be compensated for.

As to action on this subject at the extra session, it seems to us such a course is to be deprecated. While the Legislature will not be restricted to the business for which the Governor calls them together, yet, under the circumstancess, they ought to agree not to go outside of it. For seven or eight years our statutes have been growing more and more confideed, till they have arrived at such they ought to agree not to go outside of it. For seven or eight years our statutes have been growing more and more confused, till they have arrived at such a pitch of complication that none but those who have taken great pains to keep trace of the changes, can define the existing law on any given point. The work of codification was deemed necessary nearly five years ago; how much more necessary must ago; how much more necessary must it be now. Indeed the necessity is so THE effect likely to be produced general and apparent that no one ques-tions it. From what was developed at the recent session, it is certainly obvi-tracts from two of the leading English tracts from two of the leading English papers. The Times says:

agree on a location. We might, therefore, safely anticipate that if they began on the Capital question at the extra session, they would end on it, and little or nothing would be done on the Code; for after two or three weeks struggle, even if the question were disposed of, the members would be too much demoralized to do anything but adjourn.

We ask our friends of the press, as well as of the Legislature, to remember that the party which has the majority must should a the research of the press as that the party which has the majority must should a the research of the press as the party which has the majority must should a the research of carrying out measures which are the first on the party which has the majority must should a the research of carrying out measures which are the party which has the majority must should a the pressure of carrying out measures which are the party which has the majority must should a the pressure of the pressure of the party were sense.

that the party which has the majority must shoulder the responsibility of all mistakes and short comings in legislation. As such, it becomes us in the midst of an exciting campaign, to be reasonably prudent. If the Legislature goes to work with earnestness and diligence to give the people what is so much needed, we are sure they will commend themselves to men of all parties. And this, we trust, they will feel it their duty to do.

From Harper's Weelly.

"It is a pity to show how easily a President can be removed," say some.

"It is a pity to make a precedent that will lead every Congressional opposition in the majority to remove the Executive," say others. To the first remark we reply that the removal of a President for a clear violation of law is no easier a process than the Constitution intended it to be. And which is the greater pity—that the Executive should continue to impose his veto after its constitutional expiration, until he can procure the judgment of the Supreme Court, or that an Executive which refuses to obey the law should be legally removed? And if the President should be removed; a lit "easily" done? Let us see:

When the proposition was originally made, more than a year ago, the universal feeling among those who had elected Mr. Johnson was that, although he was strenuously endeavoring to bame the intentions of the people as expressed by their representatives, yet he was singeniously keeping wittin the letter of the law; while, to make sure of a successful impeachment, technical guilt was necessary.
